

Continued Health Screening

The release of COVID-19 vaccines have left many confused when it comes to job safety and protocols. Can COVID-19 Precautions End if All Employees Are Vaccinated?

Employers may still continue to use safeguards such as masks and social distancing to ensure the safety of their workers

The vaccines are only one of several tools in the arsenal used to fight COVID-19. Even after receiving both doses of the vaccine, employers should continue to implement strategies to reduce risks to the safety and health of workers and workplaces from COVID-19 including;

- » Conducting screening procedures to identify potentially ill employees before they enter the workplace
- » Screening personnel must be protected from possible exposure and should incorporate standard and appropriate transmission-based precautions
- » Continued use of safeguards such as masks and social distancing to ensure the safety of their workers
- » Any individual showing symptoms of COVID-19 or testing for an elevated temperature should be asked to leave the job site
- » Providing Handouts with what to do next should be provided to any employee who has a fever of 100.4 or greater (see self-care instructions)Severe dust storms
- » Setting up signage with CDC recommendations
- » Continued requirement of standard safety protocols (frequent hand washing, social distancing and face coverings)

There is still much unknown about the vaccines. Maintaining these precautions will help ensure a higher level of safety for employees, their families and the community at large.
